Oh, conquering the enemy is easy enough for God. And yet, just when there's no hope, just when we think we've lost, God acts in ways that we never expected. In made-for-TV dramas, guest-stars on TV series, and in the lives of ordinary people, God shows us that He is Lord of the impossible. Even when we feel like we're just a wimp, God can use us for His glory. God is not limited by our circumstances or our weaknesses. He is sovereign over all things.

Of the songwriter whose talent was so prodigious that most of us have never heard of, we are a nation of wimps. In her new book, Oh God, What About Us Wimps, Alma Ruth Smith reveals the truth about motherhood. She challenges the notion that motherhood is easy or unchallenging. Rather, she asserts that motherhood is a test of our faith and a place where we can experience God's provision.

In Alma Ruth's book, we read about a mother who, in the face of her husband's death, is faced with the difficult decision of whether to allow her children to be adopted. She prays, "Oh, God, what about us wimps?" and meditates on the idea of being a wimp in the face of adversity. She realizes that being a wimp is not about being weak. It's about being willing to trust God even when the circumstances seem impossible.

In her book, Smith reminds us that we are not the only ones who struggle. She shares stories of other mothers who have faced similar challenges and found strength in God. She encourages us to trust God and not to be afraid to admit our weaknesses.

Smith's book is a call to action for all mothers. She invites us to step out of our comfort zones and into the role of a warrior for Jesus. She challenges us to be strong, to trust God, and to face our fears. In doing so, we can fulfill our destiny planned from creation. Which is to nurture children, bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and to be strong in faith.

Smith's book is a must-read for anyone who wants to be a strong mother. It is a reminder that we are not alone in our struggles and that God is with us every step of the way. It is a call to action for us to be strong, to trust God, and to face our fears. In doing so, we can fulfill our destiny planned from creation.
